Journal

I have not touched a sewing machine since I was in middle school, but I'm honestly really excited.

I think I want to make a game day CU bag. I'm going to use one of my old shirts that's too small on me now.

I found some inspiration on Pinterest with ideas and some planning tips.

First, I am going to make the pattern pieces.

The pattern pieces are made, and I'm just thinking about how best to do this.

I think it would be best to have the front and back sewn directly together so it stays super small and perfect for stadium size.

I cut out the pieces from my T-shirt, including the strap, front and back, pocket, and the CU logo.

First, I am going to sew on the pocket and the CU logo on opposite sides.

One on the inside and one on the outside.

I just sewed the front and back together and turned it inside out so it's cleaner.

Next, I need to sew the strap so it is thicker.

I folded it toward the middle and sewed a line down the middle so it's kind of puffy on both sides of the seam.

I really like the shape of the bag so far.

The hardest part is going to be attaching the strap.

This gave me so much difficulty for some reason, but I finally got better with the sewing machine, which helped a lot.

I was able to sew further down the side of the bag so that the connection to the bag was larger and stronger.

It was a little saggy at the top opening, so I think I'm going to fold over the top and sew close to it to add more thickness.

This helped so much! Just cleaning up the edges on the top by folding over and sewing added the structure it needed.

All done!
